“ My Daughter and her daughter Charley were friends. That’s how I met Patrice because she was my daughter’s friend’s mom. I thought of her as a friend. She was always so easy to talk to. She cared so much about her family. That was so obvious the way she would talk about them. She welcomed us into her home whenever her daughter had a birthday party and we always loved being there and having fun with her and her family. We would get our girls together when we could for them to have fun together and hang out. It was always nice getting to see her and just talk to her. One of the last times we talked was on Facebook and we told each other that we missed each other. We said we would try to get together again when we could. She loved her job and helping people and caring for others as a nurse. May she Rest In Peace. We will miss you Patrice. Thank you for being a part of my life and so many others.

“ My family moved into Patrices’ neighborhood in 2003. We became fast friends. Our families spent Sundays playing games together. Settlers of Catan we would play for hours. Our kids became friends and over the years, we had many events together. Birthday parties were always a big deal at her home. One of my kids favorite memories of Patrice was trick or treating until their pillow cases were full of candy no matter how late it got she was still game to keep going. Our kids did dance together. We crafted together and started an eBay business. She always put everything she had into the things she did. Patrice was a loving mom who wanted to give her kids the world. She loved her family with every fiber of her body. She wasn’t afraid to voice her opinion when she felt passionate about something. She was never afraid to be silly and free dancing and singing in the street with the kid’s ringing in the new year or playing a wild bunco game with her friends. Patrice was a determined woman she pushed you when you needed a push and helped you when you needed help. She always believed that if you were a good person her on earth then God would be loving and forgive us of our shortcomings. Patrice wasn’t a follower she wasn’t afraid to stand out. She had a strong personality as I loved that about her. I loved her for being my friend who gave me that push to keep on pursuing my goals. You will be missed my friend. Thank you for being my friend.
Love you and your family

“ Patrice and I attended nursing school together. She was always drawn towards the babies. She'd find one in the nursery and cuddle with them on the rocker during our pediatric rotations. She had strong opinions and you never doubted her perspective. She was true to herself and a champion for others around her. A fond memory was meeting her mom and her mom allowing me to practice giving my first muscle injection (silly nurse memory). I also remember her calling after she finished the NCLEX nursing exam. She was sure she had bombed it and said she forgot everything as soon as she started. The next day, she called back so excited that she had passed the exam. It was apparent to everyone that she loved her family. She was very smart, kind, full of joy, and had a way of making everyone feel loved. Gone too soon. Until we meet again. Yvonne Ellison, RN.

“ Patrice was one opinionated, strong woman. She drove me crazy with her ideas that were opposite to mine. :) She loved my daughter as her sister even after the divorce of her brother and my daughter. Brandi was always included in the "family" time that was spent. She loved my grandkids and great-grandkids with such fervor for which I will always be grateful. God speed my friend and love and hugs to your sweet family.

“ Patrice was my most loyal client. Without fail she would bring her kids in for portraits every year I always looked forward to it. Now I am taking pictures of her grand child. I have got to watch all her kids grow up to become great adults do to her parenting. She always made me laugh. There was a time we were dance moms together and were always trying to one up each other with whos child was better, but it was all in good fun. I will miss her dearly as i am sure so many others will. Goodbye for now Patrice till we meet again. Danielle and family.
