“ Dear Lynn, When you told me about Beverly today I had tears rolling down my cheeks. I've done hair for 20 yrs in assisted living facilities, I've come across and observed many couples. YOU my dear friend are a shining example of how husbands should treat their wives. I know this had been hard on you since Beverly's stroke & my heart goes out to you at this trying time. I'll never forget the day you brought in the picture of Beverly on her wedding day, because that was a happy memory for her & that's the girl you married & still love dearly. I was touched by your thoughtfulness always concerning Beverly. Like I told you my boys saw you one day at work and were impressed by you & Beverly. She's dancing again! May the Lord bless you & your family during this time. May you be surrounded by angels to buoy you up. <3 Heather Jarvis

“ Dear Lynn and family, We enjoyed our years in Washington with all of you. Great memories sustain us and help us cope with life's trials and sorrows. I was so sorry that I didn't get to visit with Beverly, but visiting with Karen and Laurie at soccer games kept me in touch with the Jex family and I appreciated that so much. I loved your mom. She had the best sense of humor and was loved by everyone. I know the memories of your wife and mother will help you bear her loss. Such a wonderful friend! Love Essie and Dick Beeston

“ Dear Jex family: Having gone through the same experience, my heart went out to you and your family when I read of Beverly's death. No matter how prepared one is for it, it's a shocker. Although the world gives death a fearsome name, it's just the next step to our immortality and eternal life. It's nothing more than just a change of venue. I suppose we were all carefully briefed in that premortal council on what we could expect if we chose to give up our first estate and come to this earth for a taste of mortality. We chose eagerly and shouted for joy at the prospects of becoming more like our Father in heaven. But the wake-up call comes when we suddenly find ourselves alone, grieving for our companion and faced with an abrupt change in our routine. But even this suffering helps us to understand the sacrifice the Savior made when he brought about that magnificent atonement. And when we've filled our mortal grab-bag with all the experiences we came here for, then we can look forward in the eternities to come to being with them again. I can hardly wait. God bless you and your family, Don Mortensen

“ Dear Jex family,

I first met your mother when she was a Stake leader to me in Redmond Stake probably about 1970. She and your Dad have been friends ever since. When I moved to Sandy nine years ago, she was working in the sealing office at the Jordan River Temple, and I saw her a few times. She and I had a visit when she was in the Beehive House in Draper. She was alert and we had a good time. I'm sure you will all miss her even more than you ever thought. May you have the comfort of the Holy Ghost at this time.

“ When my mother was diagnosed with brain cancer and had emergency brain surgery just a couple days before I was putting on an open house wedding reception for our son, and I was pretty much falling apart, sister Jex came knocking at my door with her sleeves rolled up and ready to help. She was such an example of Christ like love to me and many others. I will always remember her kindness.

Beverly and Lynn have been dear friends of mine since moving to the Herriman area. You will be hard pressed to find two of the most faithful and dedicated disciples of the Savior. God bless each of you. One of my favorite scriptures during these challenging times comes from the book of Psalms 30:5, "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." That joy centers around our Master and a reality that life is eternal and we will see those we love again. May the Lord bless and sustain you. We send our love and heartfelt prayers in your behalf.

Dear Lynn and family,
What a beautiful example of love and devotion, to each other, to your family and to the Gospel, you and Bev have always been to us, Lynn - in the years we shared in Woodinville and in the years since, despite the lapses in time and visits. Our prayers are with you, so grateful for the knowledge and comfort of Gospel plan that you and Bev have always exemplified so beautifully. With love, Larry & Janice Woodruff
