“ Ever since I've known Lee he has been genuine kind and very understanding to everyone around him. I know Lee suffered a lot since I've known him but he always did it with humility and grace. He loved his family even if sometimes they didn't reciprocate with that. Lee was very knowledgeable in the gospel and he will be missed in the quororms where he served. He especially loved his grandchildren and did everything he could for them and their parents. I love that guy and we will see him again 😊

Yes, we struggled to reciprocate kindness because he molested me, my sister, and multiple other victims. The part where he was incarcerated and put his family through hell wasn't included in this obituary.

I'm sure he "loved" his grandchildren because they were his own personal deviancy. I'm happy I kept my children away from him and protected them. I'm irritated that I'm included in his "survived by." If anything it should say "suffered by" because that's what it was like growing up in the same household as him.

Given what Lee did is it any wonder that my niece and her sister didn't "reciprocate"? Were we supposed to feel sympathy for him? How about his victims? The pain he caused is unforgivable and no victims should be expected to feel anything but betrayal and anger. And I have to wonder why a man who molested children in his own family was still held in such high esteem by his church.
